Description of Activity:

As part of Movienomics Series-1, the Department of Economics, in collaboration with the Economics Club and the Film and Music Club, organized an engaging and insightful session centred around the critically acclaimed film A Beautiful Mind. This biographical drama vividly portrayed the life of Nobel Laureate John Nash, offering a profound exploration of the fine line between brilliance and mental illness. The film highlighted Nash's remarkable contributions to Economics, Mathematics. It powerfully showed how brilliance, resilience, and vulnerability can coexist, and how inner strength and support can drive remarkable personal success. The screening was followed by a reflective and thought-provoking address by Asst Prof Neha Satoliya, who emphasized key themes from the film such as game theory, mental health awareness, the importance of resilience, and the critical role of personal and social support systems in overcoming internal struggles. The session successfully blended cinematic appreciation with academic and emotional depth, leaving a lasting impact on all participants.
