Description of Activity:

The N.L. Dalmia English Literary Association (DELA), in collaboration with the Department of English, organized a guest lecture on The Intersection of Law and Literature, delivered by Dr. Berlina Lopes.

Dr. Lopes explored how literature influences judicial decisions, citing real-life court cases where verdicts were based on literary works. She highlighted the nuanced interplay between legal interpretation and literary analysis, sparking engaging discussions among students. To further their understanding, Dr. Lopes provided a recommended reading list of influential literary works relevant to legal studies.

The session was insightful, offering students a unique perspective on the crossover between these two fields.
